*CITES Certification and Requirements for Alligator Straps

Please take a few minutes to read this.

All Alligator straps manufactured by JS Watch co. Reykjavik are made from farm bred American Louisiana Alligator (Alligator mississippiensis).

The Convention on International Trade on Endangered Species (CITES) needs to be fully complied when trading with any part of the crocodile.

CITES permits on skins demonstrate that the skins are from farm bred animals and not illegally poached. Under CITES regulations all alligator skins must have details of country of origin, year of skinning and an individual number. This is necessary for the protection of wild crocodile populations.

The American Alligator population is not endangered or threatened and is only listed under CITES due to “similarity of appearance” (look-a-like provisions that comply with all tagging, permitting and other international trade controls).

CITES permits are needed for all Alligator straps, and different import/export rules may vary from one country to another.

Please check with your customs for all import requirements, you may need before you decide to import an alligator strap to your country.

Both the seller and the purchaser need to comply with CITES requirements and certification regulations in their country.
